

“Publishing your thesis or dissertation is the first step toward establishing yourself as an expert in your field.”

Many Doctoral dissertations and Masters theses are valuable and interesting sources of knowledge, but too often are rarely read. The ISBN number found on the verso of every book is the key to commercial book distribution. Without an ISBN number, most bookstores do not have access to it. Remarkably, most graduate works are never assigned this important identification number. As a result, they are completely isolated from mainstream commercial distribution channels, and seldom become easily accessible to many people. Consequently, few may ever have an opportunity to read your work.

Dissertation.com can make your academic work easily accessible to students, researchers and the general public by distributing it through thousands of booksellers, providing on-line access, reducing the cost of acquisition, and speeding delivery to those interested.

Most theses and dissertations address specialized markets usually served by academic journals. Unfortunately, only a review or abstract can be published. Publishing through Dissertation.com is a valuable research contribution. It makes the entire work easily accessible and provides exposure and convenience beyond traditional microfilming. In addition, publishing through Dissertation.com is an excellent way to determine your works commercial marketability while retaining full control of the distribution and copyright.
